VOL. IV. NO. 273.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1898.

PRICE, 5 CENTS

OFF FOR CALIFORNIA.

Mr. Alex. Shields and other owners have made up a carload of racers for California and this evening it will start on its westward trip. Mr. Shields takes five horses, Topmast, Snuden, Guider, Frank Jaubert and Dick Warren. The latter does not belong to Mr. Shields but will be trained by him for a Chicagoan. Topmast is a recent purchase and will be more than a useful horse. He can run well either in the mud or on a dry track. He says the colt Snuden has shown some speed and should be a bread winner. Mr. Shields remarked, "I have a fair string but there is no Logan among them." A Toronto man named Carruthers is a part owner of Topmast.

In the same car with Mr. Shields, it takes a dozen to make up a load, go four horses belonging to "Cass" and Fremont Sloan, two of F. D. Collins' and old O'Connell. The Sloan's take Dare II., Prince Blazes, Ruskin and Charmante. All have won during the past season and it seems should win at San Francisco. When good, Dare II is almost a stake horse. He cost the stable $1,450 at public auction and the date has failed to win for them.

F. D. Collins' two are Annowan and a maiden two-year old. H. Sanders takes O'Connell. This old horse seems to be as good as he ever was now and his past reputation speaks for itself.

ON BRITISH RACE TRACKS.

In the English sporting papers of the past season there has been quite a deal of discussion in regard to blackguardism that is at all times more or less prevalent on the turf in England, and which is to be seen at even the most fashionable meetings.

This recalls anew my astonishment on first going racing in this country at the orderly, good behavior of the average American racegoer, as compared with those on the other side of the water, where the hordes of foul-mouthed ruffians which are to be met on the cars and in the different enclosures (with the exception of Tattersalls) are so offensive to all decent people that it is really a wonder some determined effort has not long since been made to get rid of what is undoubtedly a great blot on English racing.

I need not refer here to the manner in which the average racegoer conducts himself in this country, but will relate what is to be seen on nearly all racecourses in England where, be it understood, there is not the system of protection that is to be found in the metropolitan district here, where one feels as safe in the ring or on the grandstand of a racetrack as he would at a church social.

In England there are organized mobs of all sorts of trick-in-the-loup fakirs, who from the moment they get into the railway carriage until they return in the evening have been playing their occupation, and a man has to become pretty well accustomed to their game and their language before he would want to ride in the same car with them a second time, while as to any respectable woman traveling in the same car, that could not be thought of.

The various racetracks the principal sources of annoyance are the welcher and the ticket snatcher. The latter gentry carry on their occupation chiefly on what is called over there "the outside" (that is, outside any of the rings) and when there are great crowds and many bookmakers. Quite a percentage of the bookmakers are safe, good men, but there are also many welchers among them, and as the ticket snatchers and welchers are practically one breed of varmint, they work in together. If there is anywhere on earth to be found a more brutal and audacious gang of ruffians the locality has not yet been heard from.

In regard to the welching fraternity, there are any number of well known ones, they have been at the game for twenty years or more and are still at it, although they are known to the police and also to the officials at the different race meetings, but in this, as in other matters in relation to racing in England, everything is conducted on the principal of the survival of the fittest. The racegoer is permitted to pay his money and protect himself, and if he hands his money over to a welcher instead of ascertaining who is safe and who is not, that is his lookout.

This may be all right in one view at least, but in the matter of the ticket snatchers, who are simply bands of brutal thieves, it would seem as though neither the police nor the racing officials have done their duty by the racegoing public, else this evil would long ago have been stamped out. The ticket game is worked in this way: Backers are spotted when they make their bets, and in the event of their horse winning or their ticket in any other way calling for cash, when their ticket is held up to the bookmaker, who is always on a box or something to elevate him above the crowd, it is promptly snatched.

A favorite method is for one of the gang to get on the opposite side of the victim and just as he is in the act of handing his ticket up to give him a smart rap on the shoulder, which, in nine cases out of ten, will cause him to turn his head that way and in a twinkling a confederate has the ticket, and although the victim may have plenty of witnesses, he has no redress, and almost invariably the snatcher collects the coin.

There are, of course, lots of instances where some game, handy fellows get satisfaction, but the thieves are so well banded together that usually discretion is the better part of valor. On rare occasions a policeman will take a hand but it is so common for racegoers to be welched and to have their tickets snatched that but little is thought of it, and it is only when a victim is being abused that the "bobby" interferes, so that it will be seen there is practically no protection for the small bettor in England.

In the rings, with the exception of Tattersalls, welching also abounds, and it is rare indeed that money once handed over to a welcher is ever recovered. In this connection it may be stated that racegoers in England have to pay much more for accommodations than is the case in this country. Many of the older courses are free to what is called the field in this country, but what costs two dollars at the first class meetings in the neighborhood of New York costs five dollars in England, and with no such sense of security of purse or person as is the case here.

There has been, as stated above, repeated newspaper agitation going on for years in regard to racetrack ruffianism in England, but things are just about the same today, according to what is reported to have been going on during the past season, as they were twenty and thirty years ago. And it must be said that this is one thing that is very much better done in this country, where such scenes as are common on English racetracks are practically unknown. "Kelston" in Morning Telegraph.

NOTES OF THE TURF.

Somewhat unexpectedly the Latonia authorities abruptly brought their extended meeting to a close yesterday. The announcement was not made until five races had been disposed of. Bad weather was assigned as the reason, but while that was no doubt one of the discouraging features, it is more than probable that the principal cause of the discontinuance was the lack of paying patronage.

Jockey Sherland, who rode Red Monk in the third race at Nashville yesterday, is not expected to live. He was hurt internally, and it is feared also that his skull is fractured. Mays, who caused the accident, was set down indefinitely.

Green B. Morris has sold the 2-year-old colt, Tyrshena, by Tyrant—Shena Van, to Messrs Plate & Co.

Winner—B. g. by St. Carlo—Royal Bess.
Start good. Won easily. Our Climate was best at the weights. He is in good form and a stayer and a particularly brilliant hurdler. Stan Powers ran his race. Tom Calvert showed some speed but is short. Kruna ran an honest race. Babieca is not ready.

Our Climate, place, 4 to 5. Hohenlohe, place, 2 to 1; show, even. Stan Powers, show, 1 to 2.
